DENTISTRY.

INDIAN PHYSICIANS. Students Who Have Qualified Themselves to Heal the Sick.

Quite a disposition is being manifested for the practice of medicine. Miss Susan La Flesche graduated from a medical school ing from the university of Champaign, Ill., graduated from a medical school in Chicago Montana, Dr. Eastman, a Sioux Indian, a graduate of Dartmouth College, has just completed a three years' course of medical study and graduated with honor from the school of medicine in the Boston University, and is soon to have an appointment as Indian physician.
It is said at the Indian bureau that there is perhaps no part of the Indian service where educated Indians can be of more benefit to their race than in the medical department. The Indians generally know very little of the laws of health, are very negligent in the care of their persons, are exposed to not only cli-matic changes, but also to epidemics and con-tagious diseases against which they are unable to contend. The physicians provided for the Indians by the government are few in number and are not always well qualified for their work. Educated Indians are better suited than white man for the practice of medicine among the Indians because of their acquaintance with the language, their sympathy with their peo-ple and their ability to adapt themselves to the peculiar environment of an Indian reservation

THE STATE OF WASHINGTON. Its Population (Based on Census Returns and Estimates) About 340,000.

Superintendent Porter has transmitted to Representative Wilson of Washington an estimate of the population of that state based upon the daily report cards of the enumerators and estimates of cards not vet received. According to this estimate the population of the state is about 340,000. In his letter Mr. Porter savs: "These postal cards show the number of name which the enumerators took each day. If there is no change in the estimates and the cards not yet received hold good the population will be about what is represented in the table. You will of course, understand that this is not in any sense an official estimate, nor is it an estimate upon which you could absolutely rely. I might add, however, that the chances are that the population will exceed rather than be less than

The bureau of Catholic Indian missions is advised by telegraph of the death, on the 26th instant, of its vice director, Very Rev. George L. Father Willard was formerly the vicar general of Bishop Marty's diocese in Dakota, where he gained a large practical explay second fiddle to two French war ships. perience in Indian matters. Because of this fact he was brought to Washington to assist in bureau. In addition to his bureau duties he officiated at the Immaculate Conception and St. Mary's churches. His loss is deeply regretted by his associates in the bureau and will e a source of sorrow to the many warm friends he made among the parishioners of these two churches.

The Weather and the Crops. The weather-crop bulletin of the Signal Office says: The week ending July 26 was cool average daily temperature was from 4 degrees to 8 degrees below the normal of the week. The week was warmer than usual from Texas northward to the Dakotas and over the Bocky mountain and plateau regions. The tempera-ture for the season from January 1 to July 26 continues in excess over the central valleys, southern, middle and New England states, but this excess is less marked than it the daily average now ranges from 2 degrees to 4 degrees above the normal. There was more than the usual amount of rain during the week generally. The rainfall for the season continues in excess in the lake region, the Ohio and cen-tral Mississippi valleys and over the greater portion of the middle Atlantic and west gulf

Reports from the northwest indicate that the weather in that section during the past week was generally favorable, although in some localties dry weather continues and crops are much in need of rain. Generally throughout the cotton states the weather was especially favorable to crops. In the west guif states the outlook for cotton is materially improved; few worms are reported, but as yet no serious damage has occurred, although there is some fear of injury to the crops from this source. The rains during the latter portion of the week proved beneficial to growing crops in the midile Atlantic states, aithough more rain is needed in western New York. New Jersey reports the weather too cool and dry during the early part of the week; grapes are injured by black rot. Reports from New England indicate that crops have been injured by drought, notwithstanding the general rains during the latter part of the week. Frosts caused some damage in Massachusetts on the 21st, and hail in Connecticut on the 19th and 20th injured crops in a rew locali-ties. Reports from the Pacific coast indicate that the weather during the week was excel-lent for harvesting, which is now in progress in Oregon, where the conditions favor an unusually good crop of wheat, a large crop of to it.

A PREHISTORIC GIANT. Club Found on a Shelf of Rock.

A Fort Dodge dispatch to the Philadelphia Times says: While blasting stone from the Mardingham quarry there was recently discovered the prints of a gigantic foot on a shelf of rock, which had been covered with earth and vegetation, but which was displaced by the explosion. The foot is apparently that of a human being, though provided with nails of great length and curved slightly at the end. as can be seen by the deeper indentations at the ends of the marks. The prints are seven in number, varying considerably in distinctness, each measuring a fraction less than two feet in length and broad in proportion. The toes are shorter than is usual in the human foot and spread much wider apart, but the heel is narrow and rounding. The prints all point in the same direcing. The prints all point in the same direction and are from four to four and a half feet apart, the most clearly defined sinking about two inches into the rock. There is in addition to the foot-marks indications of some heavy object having been dragged over the rocks after the creature whose backs are there. This object was probably a club, to judge from the marks it made.

The ledge of rock on which this valuable record of a prehisteric age is to be seen was detached with the greatest care, but an unfortunate fall broke the piece right across the footprint most clearly defined. The breakage will be repaired as skillfully as possible with cement and the rock forwarded to the Museum of Geology and Paleontology at Dubuque, Mr. Mardingham, who owns the quarry, presenting it to that institution.
